TOWN OFFICIAL PAPER.

VOLUME IV. BERKELEY, CAL., SATURDAY AUGUST 29, 1896. NUMBER 50

TO WED IN THE NAVY

Genevieve English a Society Young Lady

CAPTURES THE HEART OF JOHN IRWIN JR.

The Wedding to take place upon the return of the Thetis from her cruise.

Will Wed in the Navy.

A most interesting bit of society news was given out yesterday in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Genevieve English, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. English of Jackson street, and Ensign John Irwin Jr., United States Navy, son of Admiral John Erwin, retired. The engagement has been kept a close secret from all except a very few intimate friends of the young people. The bride prospective is one of the leaders among the younger set in Oakland, and has been prominent in all the social events in Oakland and in San Francisco.

Miss English has beauty of a marked character. She has been a very popular attendant upon the cotillions and other affairs of the social seasons, and she is notably one of Oakland's belles. Miss English has a wide circle of friends among the little settlement of naval people at Mare Island, and she has been in that exclusive set one of the admired. The society gatherings at the Island are among the big affairs of the year, and few have been held that Miss English has not attended. It was there she met the young naval officer who in a few months will claim her as his bride.

Ensign Erwin is Paymaster, at present attached to the United States ship Thetis. He has been in the service for two years past, and is very popular among the young officers of the navy. His home is at Mare Island where he has spent a great part of his life.

The date of the wedding has not yet been fixed. It will not take place until after the return of the Thetis from a southern cruise for which the ship is now being prepared. The vessel will probably be away for six months. The wedding will likely be one of the events of the early spring next year. Ensign Erwin will be called up his ship in a very short time, and for that reason the wedding will be delayed until after his return.

Ladies of Laughter.

The arena is the latest thing to succumb entirely to the resistless aggressiveness of the new woman movement. Not content with winning and seductively wearing equestrian, aerial, acrobatic and iron jawed laurels in the ring, the up-to-date maiden has seized upon the whip and usurped the throne of Momus, by triumphantly assuming the roles of ringmaster and clown in the great Forepaugh and Sells Brothers united circuses. Nor is her ambition based on unstable sawdust, for she has made a prodigious hit.

The architect who drew the plans for the affiliated colleges' buildings seems to have erred in the estimates. According to his figures on the cost of building, the Board of Regents should have $20,000 above the bids, but the contrary is the case. Secretary Bonte now says the Regents are in a quandary over the difficulty, as there are no additional funds in sight.

The Citizens' Suffrage League of Berkeley held two precinct meetings yesterday, one in precinct 10, at the residence of Mrs. G. W. Haight of Dwight Way, and one in precinct 2 at the residence of Mrs. Mary Smith of Virginia street. Dr. Kellegg Lane addressed the meeting in precinct 10 and Dr. Carrie Young spoke in precinct 2.

D. E. Cotton states that the suit against him for title in the Eureka Oil Works has not been decided. Only the correctness of a $2000 note has been decided and that he confessed judgement to.

C. C. Cornwell, formerly deputy coroner under Dr. Baldwin, has given up the position that he held under Mr. Brown, the undertaker and with his family has gone to Fresno to reside.

A NEW AGITATOR.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York to Visit California.

Mrs. Catt Coming

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York, Chairman of the Organization Committee of the National American Women Suffrage Association, is on her way to California, where she will spend a couple of months. The object of her visit is to assist the movement already commenced to secure the adoption at the coming election of the Constitutional Amendment giving the franchise to the women of California. Mrs. Catt ranks next to Susan B. Anthony in the suffrage work and she considered one of the most brilliant women orators in the United States. nt

Mrs. Catt will deliver addresses throughout the States in the interests of the suffrage cause.

As Other See Us.

The following letter from a Woodland boy who is attending the University was published in the last issue of the Woodland Mail, and as it is quite interesting we republish it:

Ed. Mail: As a rule people at home are to a certain extent interested in what their friends and acquaintance away from home are doing. So I take the occasion to gossip a little about the "Woodland Colonev" in Berkeley thinking that these few items might not be altogether without interest to the good people of Woodland.

The roll of Yolo County students now attending the University has been increased, with the entrance of the class of 1900 by four more viz: Frank Porter Will Spencer, Earnest Clausen, and Loren Kennedy. Although the last named has not lived in Yolo County for a number of years, he may still be counted a Yolo boy for he was born and raised there and his parents still reside in Hungry Hollow.

The Yolo County students in the upper classes are taking quite a prominent part in University life. Arthur Elston is president of the Associated Students and editor of the University Magazine. Fred Fairchilds is president of the College Y. M. C. A. and Chas. Elston is teaching Physics in Boone's Academy. He is also one of the associate editors of the "Berkeleyan," the College daily. Hartley Peart and Hayes Gable are assistant editors on the same paper.

If all reports be true Woodland is about to lose another family and Berkeley to gain one, that of Captain Spencer which will move down here in the near future.

The Berkeley Bible Seminary, the endowment of which created such a lively interest in Woodland this summer has opened with an attendance of about twenty students.

Turning now from those things which directly concern the Woodland people in Berkeley let me say a few words about the University at large. Although the exact number cannot be told yet, the class of 1900 bids fair to be the largest in the history of the University. At present the class numbers something like four hundred and twenty, with the probability of quite a few more being admitted. The University now is in about the same condition as the boy who was continually and rapidly growing and had no means with which to buy clothes. With the great increase in numbers in the last few years there has been no proportionate increase in the appropriations, consequently the faculty have to solve the problem of how to provide for, and instruct fifteen or sixteen hundred students with the accommodation and teaching force meant for only nine or ten hundred. In vain has the standard of entrance been raised. The students still come and unless the University gets an appropriation soon, the faculty will be compelled to hold over flow recitations out on the campus.

A letter to a newspaper during a political campaign would not be complete if it did not have some mention of politics in it. So I will close my letter with few remarks concerning politics in the University. The sentiment in the University of California is overwhelmingly in favor of McKinley. It may be either protection or sound money or good common sense—most likely the last—which has created this strong sentiment in favor of the Republican nominee. But whatever created it, there is no doubt but that it is here and the boys are enthusiatic. They have organized a College Republican club, and have entered the fight with all the spirit of youth and with a determination to make the club a factor in in the campaigan.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

What is Going on in Local Playhouses.

NEW PLAYS FOR NEXT WEEK AT THE THEATERS.

Movements of Noted actors and Different Theatrical Companies.

Theatrical Notes.

The Columbia Theatre School of Dramatic Art are rehearsing a new play by Alice Yates entitled, "The Dummy," which they will produce at their next public performance.

It is predicted that Annie Held the great concert half singer will make a greater sensation when she appears with Evans and Hoey's "Parlor Match" Company, than did even Chevalier or Fregoli. The tour of this company from Chicago to the Coast is to be managed by Friedlander Gottleib & Co.

At the Macdonough Theatre in Oakland next Tuesday evening "The Gay Parisions," Manager Charles Frohman's latest comedy success will be seen for the first time. It will be presented by the same cast, headed by W. J. Ferguson and Miss Sadie Martinot that originally presented it at Hoyt's Theater, New York, and that made such a success at the Baldwin. Its New York run of five months would have been made indefinite but for the fact of other engagements. In Boston and Chicago long runs were also achieved. The farce which is even a greater success than "Charley's Aunt" is now being played in London England, under the title of "A Night Out."

Corinne's Company this year will number seventy-five people, the largest that she has ever appeared with in any city in the country. They come to the coast in November.

A lively interest is being taken by the mediums and spiritualists in the expose of spiritualism to be given at the Auditorium Sunday night by T. C. Alexander. Several mediums have responded to Mr. Alexander's sweeping challenge and have announced their intention of being present for the purpose of producing manifestations which they claim are genuine and cannot be exposed. The mediums are up in arms, Mr. Alexander is determined and confident of routing them, and an exciting evening is promised when the contending forces meet.

"The Matrimonial Maze," a rattling good comedy by Walter Craven, will shortly be produced by the Frawley Company for the first time at the Columbia theater.

De Mille & Belasco's great New York Lyceum Theater's success "The Wife" will follow "The Social Trust" at the Columbia theater. The Frawley Company have been rehearsing this play for sometime.

"Town Topics" had its first production in Cleveland, on Monday last, and met with tremendous success. It is said the specialities are particularly good.

Senator Perkins and the Honorable W. W. Foote are energetic in getting up a benefit for Mr. W. J. Egan, a deaf mute who goes to Washington to the school for the deaf and dumb. The Reliance Club will assist the young man when the entertainment takes place at the Macdonongh Theatre in Oakland, on Monday, September 7th.

Ten Renowned Bareback Equestrians

A circus without first-class bareback riders would be regarded almost as incomplete as the play of Hamlet with all save Polonius omitted. The management of the great Forepaugh and Sell's Brothers' America's greatest shows consolidated more than recognize this fact by introducing at each performance the Offords, Frank Melville, Linda Jeal, the Hobsons, Polly Lee, William Gorman, Donna Adele and William Wallett, the recognized ten champion principal [illegible]ble, carrying, jockey, juggling and hurdle baceback equestrians of both hemispheres.

Ella Dowd charged with battery will bd tried in Justice Lord's Court before a jury on Monday next.

THE POPULISTS

Of West Berkeley to Have a Torchlight Procession.

Gold and Silver.

A mass meeting is to be held at Sisterna Hall, on Tuesday evening, September 1st, under the auspices of the Populist Club of West Berkeley, to which the members of all parties are invited.

Before the meeting there will be a grand torch light procession and street drill by the Zouave League of Oakland. Old time martial music will be furnished by the Zouave League Drum Corp.

At the meeting in the hall, the following program has been arranged for:

Remarks on the People's Party Platform, by Green Majors.

The Silver Question, by Burdett Cornell.

Song, "The Star Spangled Banner."

The St. Louis Convention, by J. C. Buttner.

The Committee in charge of the affair consists of Adam Thresher, Paul O'Connell, Dan McLaughlin and Fred Rawson.

Educational Precinct Meetings.

The ladies held a precinct meeting at the residence of Mrs. Mary A Smith on Virginia street, North Berkeley, yesterday afternoon, when under a heading of what might be considered the good of the order. Dr. Carrie Young and Mrs. Mary A. Smith made stirring appeals to friends of the Suffrage movement to give all aid to the cause possible between now and the day of election. There was more or less of a general discussion upon matters relative to the rights of woman. The constant agitation of this matter is bringing new members who want to be better educated on this particular education.

Precinct meetings will be held quite often from now until after the election in November.

Another precinct meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Mary Haight, President of the Association, on Dwight way. This was well attended and matters were discussed on the same line as at the meeting at North Berkeley.

Mrs. Haight is a clear and forcible speaker and illustrates her ideas in a manner that is quickly comprehended by her auditors.

At a recent suffrage meeting she spoke of an old law forbidding women to learn the alphabet lest they should supplant men, and that when she was a girl student at Oberlin, she was not allowed to recite in rhetoric, as the boys did, but that now the girls are the best speakers there. If the family be the unit that is the place to discuss questions of State, at the fire-side, in the family. Husband and wife, children and friends should talk over political questions together amicably, viewing all sides, inciting patriotism so that our country may be blessed.

The ladies of Berkeley will be afforded opportunies for the next two months of attending these meetings and to hear these matters fully discussed. As this campaign is to be one of education, it is necessary for everyone to learn all that is possible and no better way of educating the people could be devised than in having these neighborly meetings where all meet on the common ground and exchange views with one and another on the political situation.

President Martin Kellogg of the State University has issued a circular regarding the agricultural meetings which are to be held throughout the State. In speaking of the purpose of the meetings he says: "A prominent purpose of these meetings is to obtain the opinion of those interested in agriculture throughout the entire State as to the best means of spreading and practically applying the scientific teaching and knowledge of the University of California on agriculture and other industrial subjects."

A minstrel performance will be given in Shattuck Hall on September 22d for the benefit of the University of California track team. The performers will be A. S. Phorer, Clinton R. Morse, George Koppitz, Alexander Lipman, Clifford McClellan, Robert McClellan, University of California Banjo and Mandolin clubs, and Baldwin and Durant, the banjo soloists. A meeting is to be held in Stiles Hall Tuesday to arrange for rehearsals.

W. J. Schmidt left last evening with the Alliance Club for Los Angeles. It is his intention to make a speech there in favor of good roads.

A CRAZY CHINAMAN

Gives Conducter Compton of the Local

CONSIDERABLE TROUBLE BY AN ATTEMPT TO KILL HIMSELF.

He Afterwards Engages Joe Segui in a Footrace and Lands in the County Jail.

A Crazy Chinaman.

Yesterday afternoon Conductor Compton of the West Berkeley local, had an experience with an insane Chinaman that he is not likely to forget very soon.

When he left Shell Mound at 2 o'clock one of his passengers was a well dressed Chinaman who sat quietly in the corner of the car until he was asked for his ticket, and then he showed signs of insanity for he "no sabbee" ticket and would not produce one, but grew more excited every minute, calling for a knife with which to cut his throat the conductor's throat, or anybody's throat, he was not particular. As Mr. Compton did not wish to leave this world by that route he did not accomodate his passenger by lending him a knife.

When the train arrived at Delaware street the Chinaman refused to get off the car and he had to be put off. He then determined to throw himself in front of the engine and let it run over him.

The conductor finally persuaded him that being run over by an engine and train was not the proper way for a Chinaman of his standing to die and got him off the track.

The Chinaman then took it into his head that he was a foot racer and he started off at a lively gait with Joe Segui close at his heels.

After a long chase he was captured by Joe and was turned over to Marshal Lloyd who lost no time in taking him to the county jail. He will be examined for insanity to-day and will probably be committed to one of the State asylums.

A Garden Fete.

On Wednesday September 9th (Admission Day) a garden fete, with many outdoor attractions will be held at La Loma Park, the home of Captain and Mrs. Thomas, under the auspices of the ladies of the Unitarian Church.

A Big Swimming Match.

Those people who go out to the Sutro Baths on Sunday next will have an opportunity of witnessing the greatest swimming matches that have ever occured on the Pacific Coast. The principal races will run for the quarter-mile championship of the Pacific and the 100-yard amateur championship of America.

Among those who have already entered are Dana Thompson, half mile champion of America; Dan Green, quarter mile champion of the Pacific Coast; M. H. Gay, 1000-yard champion of California; Clyde Hawthorne, of Santa Cruz, amateur champion Pacific Coast, Dan Renear, amateur champion 100 yard swimmer of America and Mr. Charles Cavill, champion of Australia, his first appearance in a swimming contest in this country. Besides the names of those given there will be others who will make an effort to win.

As there has been no occasion of the kind which can compare with this event there is no doubt but what the street cars will have some trouble in carrying all the passengers who may want to travel. It would be advisable to make an early start as in all probability the day will be a fine one and warm enough to make the sea breeze very refreshing.

Skeletons are getting to be thick as flies around the Oakland Race tract according to a Berkeley paper which unearths one every day. No one sees them, however, except the sensational reporter.

The Bryan Free Silver Club at the State University arranged for a meeting yesterday afternoon in North Hall, but when the hour of meeting arrived Chairman Finnegan was confronted by empty chairs. Only five or six free silver men turned up and the meeting was adjourned.

FOR THE GAMBLERS

The State Fair Now Turned Over to the Gamblers.

Horse Racing at Sacramento

Under the guise of a State Fair at Sacramento the taxpayers of California have to pay a large amount of money for the benefit of gamblers and the rough element of the country. As a rule but a small portion of the quasi good people give it a countenance. The city of Sacramento becomes filled with an element that threatens the lives of its reputable citizens, and for the time being the scene of debauchery becomes noted.

Attention has often been called to these facts by the country press of California whose patrons have to pay the fiddler. The law allowing it was conceived in sin and iniquity.

The State Fair for what it was originally intended, had good ideas and if properly carried out might have insured much benefit to the country when properly conducted. But the people have from time to time found out that the original intention has been used only as a cover for baser purposes. It is to be hoped that the business of the Fair will be fully looked into this year and its iniquities fully exposed so that the incoming Legislature may take it in hand and either improve or abolish it.

Church Services

Services will held in Stiles Hall tomorrow morning by the Unitarian Society, Rev. E. B. Payne, pastor. Sunday school at 9:45 a. m., and sermon at 11 a. m. This church has open doors and a hospitable welcome for all comers, whether as permanent co workers with us or guests of a day.

Charles Becker, son of J. J. Becker of Reno, George Farron and William Worden came down from Reno in three days on bicycles. Mr. Becker is visiting his uncle Mr. E. Claisey at South Berkeley.

W. R. Wright has taken a lease of the premises now occupied by Joseph Raymond, on Stanford avenue, as a shoe store, and will immediately have the same fitted up as a first-class cigar store.

Our contemporary's proof reader must have been spending time over the files of the GAZETTE to find typographical errors, instead of getting the mote out of his own eyes when he read the criticism on Professor Keiler's late poem. The friends of the poet must feel greatly mortified.

The sixty-second regular meeting of the Philosophical Union was held last evening in Professor Howison's lecture-room. After reports Professor Howison addressed the union upon "A General Account of the Philosophy of Hegel and of Dr. W. T. Harris." Dr. Harris will visit the University in December.

The Bath Beach Coach which has heretofore been connecting with the University avenue cars at Sixth street every trip every day, will only connect with the cars on Saturdays during the balance of the season. The public who patronize Bath Beach should paste this notice in their hats for future references.

The Populists of East Berkeley will hold a meeting on next Wednesday evening at Pythian Hall. E. M. Wardwell chairman of the Populist State Central Committee will speak as will N. J. Munson, of Alameda, James Andrews, candidate of the Socialist party for Lieutenant Governor will also address the meeting.

Schmitt & Zeiner are in the Shattuc block.

PRECINCT MEETINGS

The Woman Suffragists of Berkeley

HOLD TWO PRECINCT MEETINGS YESTERDAY

Which Were Addressed by Dr. Lane Kellogg and Mrs. Haight.

Precinct Suffrage Work

At the recent meeting of members of the Alameda county Suffrage Campaign Committee, sub-committees were formed to effectually organize the county, poll the vote and institute precinct meetings.

As the Berkeley campaign work in outline and scope, had already been formulated, the work as far as advanced was endorsed by the county committee, and word given to proceed.

The names of the entire voting population of Berkeley were procured from the register.

The thirteen Berkeley precincts are represented by thirteen corresponding little books, the leaves alphabetically disposed, contain the names of voters right up to the last registration day.

The fly-leaf of each book contains the precinct boundaries of the especial precinct designated on the cover.

On several leaves in the back of each book is to be found regulations and suggestions.

Each one of these books is to be given to the Chairman of the precinct to which it belongs.

These regulations and suggestions might prove of worth to a number interested in the work, so they shall be given in detail.

At each precinct meeting let the Chairman ascertain how many of those present will lend their parlors to precinct meetings.

Write down their names and address in the back of this book. This method will give the Chairman sufficient names to choose from at her pleasure. By judicious selection a circuit of meetings can thus be formed in each precinct.

Divide up the resources of your precinct in such a manner that a meeting may be held the same day each week. Not more than two precincts having the same day. This method is imperative in order to allow the officers of the Suffrage Club to attend different meetings, and to permit the visiting of different precinct workers.

Select your house for a meeting several days in advance so the Chairman on Precinct work can be duly notified in order to supply speakers and to furnish the press with notices.

The method of conducting each precinct meeting is left to the judgment of the Chairman in whose precinct the meeting occurs. This pertains to music light refreshment, etc.

Let the woman at whose house the meeting is to be held, do her part in inviting her neighbors and friends.

Inviting the people in the neighborhood of each house, where a meeting is contemplated, will afford the chairman an opportunity to check off many names of voters in Precinct Books, and thereby lighten the work of canvassing.

Notices should be sent in once a week regarding the polling of the vote. If those against the carrying of the 11th Amendment greatly outnumber those for the measure, then radical methods must be employed to meet the exigencies of the case. Suffrage literature should be distributed at the precinct meetings, and upon application to the Chairman on Precinct Work, it will be supplied.

Let the Chairman of each precinct take note of any unique of pronounced objections to the 11th Amendment, and give the cue to her speakers so those objections may be met.

Whether the meetings shall be held during the afternoon or evening may depend entirely upon the judgment of each Chairman. The only object being to leave no stone unturned to agitate the Amendment.

To designate the attitude of the voter, place "f" or "a," for or against, after his name in the book.

Every two weeks a meeting of Chairmen will be held in order to discuss progress.

Let the Chairman of each precinct select those personal in her precinct who may render her assistance.

Speakers should be enjoined to have comprehensive notes or papers for the benefit of the Press."

The precinct work in Alameda and Berkeley has advanced to a greater degree of perfection than in any other parts of the county.

Two of the Berkeley precincts, the first and the tenth, are in full running order with three more to fall directly into line.

The responsible work at present is in assigning precinct work to those who will untiringly prosecute it.

Mrs. Smith, of 2029 Virginia St., has kindly consented to take the 1st precinct. Mrs.——, the 3rd. Mrs. Bangs the 8th. Mrs. Haight, the 10th Mrs. Keith, the 11th, with 8 yet unassigned.

Bright words of encouragement greet the workers at every hand. Two members of the club have been trying to form the nucleus of a branch club at West Berkeley.

While prosecuting that work the opportunity has been taken of checking off names in the Precinct Books.

As groups of men are employed there in mill and factory. And royal good fellows most of them are two.

Two precinct meetings were held Friday afternoon one at Mrs. Haight's the other at Mrs. Smith's.

ELINOR CARLISLE,
Chairman Precinct Work.

SHOULD ACCEPT.

Mayor Davie of Oakland and Mayor Sutro of San Francisco, have been invited by a man named Erickson of San Francisco, to accompany him up on the trial trip of his flying machine from the roof of the Mechanic's Fair building in San Francisco to the dome of the capitol in Sacramento.

Neither of the Mayors have yet announced their acceptance of the invitation and it is greatly feared that they will not. The people of Oakland and San Francisco should unite in signing a monster petition to Mayors Sutro and Davie, urging upon them the great honor that has been conferred upon them by the inventor of the flying machine, and the fame that awaits them if they make a successful trip.

Of course they are taking many chances in making the trip but no more so than the inventor who will accompany them. Again if it should happen that they were killed, the cities of Oakland and San Francisco would survive the shock and a great many people are unchartable enough to say that the cities would be greatly benefitted thereby.

An earnest effort will be made to have these two dignataries take the trip, not with the hope that they will meet with disaster, but for the benefit of science, as it is very desirable that one of these machines be tested in time to prepare it for Mr. Bryan's trip to Mexico after the coming election.

SHOULD BESTIR THEMSELVES

Nearly every society in San Francisco has arranged for a day and evening programme at the coming Mechanic's Fair in San Francisco. Invitations have been extended to the University of California and to Stanford University, setting apart separate days for the Universities. Stanford has notified the committee on entertainment that they will accept the invitation tendered them and that they will prepare an entertainment that will eclipse any that will be given during the continuance of the Fair.

The students of the State University have not yet made any move in the matter, nor have they notified the entertainment committee that they would accept the invitation that has been extended to them.

This is to be regretted and it is hoped that the proper authorities will immediately take hold of the matter and accept the invitation after which they will appoint committees to arrange a program. The Exposition band has been placed at their disposal to play just such music as the students may desire. With this band and the talent that the University has within its confines, a program that will do credit to the University and the State, can be arranged.

The time is getting short and we trust that the students will take up the matter at once for observance of University day at the Fair will not only be of great benefit to the University, but it will be of great value to the town of Berkeley.

OTHERS HAVE RIGHTS.

We believe that the bicycle is a grand thing for the people; that its use causes health to stay with the rider, and that it has to a very great extent been useful in lessening the evils of tobacco and liquor. We also admire a skillful bicyclist, either man or woman, as they glide along the streets.

We do object, however, to bicyclists thinking that they own the earth, and that pedestrians have no rights whatever, and we are sorry to say that in this particular the bicycle has become a nuisance.

Especially is this the case on the Oakland boats. There is scarcely a trip made by the boats that are not patronized by numerous bicyclists, and when the boat reaches the pier on either side of the bay, they are always in a hurry to be the first ones off the boats, and in this desire they loose all sight of the rights of other passengers, for they start through the crowds on a run, causing everybody to get out of their way. If they knock you down they think that it is a good joke, and pass right on and laugh at you. They are a special terror to women and children who cross the ferries, and complaints are being registered every day.

If bicyclists must use the boats it would be well to adopt a rule, making them wait until the foot passengers are in the boat and then allow them to go aboard in a body. The same rule should apply when the boat makes its landing. No bicycle with his or her wheel should be allowed to leave the boat until all the passengers have got off.

Bicyclists must be restricted in some manner, and the sooner it is done the better, both for their own account, and for the safety and convenience of the people who do not use bicycles as a means of locomotion.

Alamedans are in the throes of excitement over the report that an eastern company of capitalists desire to erect the largest glaze fruit manufactory in the world in that city. It is reported that the company will immediately expend $750,000 in the erection of its plant and that it will buy up all the Alameda securities that are now costing 6 or 7 per cent and will only charge 3 and 4 per cent. All of this is to be done provided the city of Alameda will exempt the company from taxation for a period of ten years. There may be some people who believe that such a proposition has been made, but the majority of people know that some one is talking through his hat and is trying to gain a little notoriety for himself and for Alameda. When capitalists have money to spend by the millions, the matter of taxation for ten years will not affect them any. If they see a chance to establish a business that will pay, they will at once invest and do business. They ask for no bonds.

W. J. Bryan has come out in his true colors for at a speech made a couple of days ago he declared himself for class legislation. He wants the poor to array themselves against the capital. What a vain delusion it is that he is hugging. Even the most ignorant knows that labor cannot exist without capital and that capital cannot exist without labor. They both have to go hand in hand, and when they do so the country is prosperous and when they do not starvation and bankruptcy stare our people in the face. Mr. Bryan is now trying to divorce capital and labor and if he succeeds the country would go to the demnition bow wows faster than any trolley line can travel. We do not believe that the American people will be humbugged by any such people as W. J. Bryan, Senator Tillman, Tom Watson, Governor Altgeld, Mayor Pennoyer or Senator Stewart, none of whom are poor men, and all of whom make their creditors pay them in gold.

The President has the power regardless of Congress to place this country on a silver basis. All he has got to do is to authorize the Treasurer to pay out the gold reserve as long as it lasts, and then pay in silver. But who will take the silver? That is the question. If you would like to know the result of such a policy, investigate the condition of our sister Republic, Mexico, and you have your answer.

President Harrison in his speech made a few days ago at New York, pointed out very clearly the fallacy of free coinage. He admitted that the United States could coin silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 but the fact that it did so would not give the dollar that value. If the mints were open to the free coinage of silver into dollars from all the bullion that will be presented, there will be no responsibility on the part of the government to redeem that money at a ratio of 16 to 1.

A COUNTRY LANE.

Between steep banks it winds along,
Overhung with leafy hawthorn trees,
From which the lark, the thrush's song
Floats softly on the soft south breeze.
There is the earliest primrose found,
And modest harebells violets grow,
And trembling with flowers star the ground,
And humble ragged robins blow.

There, too, on golden summer eves
The old folks like to stroll and talk,
Or slowly, under whispering leaves,
The shy sheltered young lovers walk,
While fresh as youthful hopes, earliest
Now growths about their lingering feet,
And tender fronds of fern uncurl,
And all the balmy air is sweet.

With mingled scents of thyme and brier,
And wilding roses, passion pale,
As trembles through the dewy dusk
The music of the nightingale,
And, stealing from some hidden nook,
Soft as the sighs of angels in the sky,
By pleasant ways, a silver brook
Runs, sings, on to the silver sea.

—St. Nicholas in Chambers' Journal.

SHE DID IT FOR LOVE.

It was Shrove Tuesday night in the year 1831—a night memorable in the kingdom of Saxony as one of almost unprecedented coldness. Three travelers on horseback were on their ways from Bieslau across the Erzengebirge, the grand mountains, to Dresden, a distance of some 150 miles. Railways in those days were almost unknown in most of the German provinces. Men of means rode in caravans with their servants, while the poorer classes were either obliged to walk, or, if their purses allowed, rode on mules.

Our three friends seemed to belong to the former class. They were not attended by liveried servants, nor had they a large supply of provisions, but their commodious figures and general appearance were all one to suppose that they were men in the higher walks of life.

As they approached the side of a mountain torrent one of the three caught sight of an old village church. "Come, Waldemar," he exclaimed, "we can take an hour's rest here. Our horses need it, and we still have sufficient food for our lunch." All three dismounted, and, having tied their horses, were about to enter the church when a peasant came up, with two dogs at his heels. "A bad night," said the former speaker as the man halted before him. "I fear we will not reach Dresden before daybreak, and the weather is not improving."

"Thirty-five or more miles before you," replied the peasant, "and it's a terrible ride. But if your lordships care to tarry there's an inn not so far distant."

"Where?" asked all three together.

"Just one mile from here," he replied. "You'll have no trouble finding it, sirs, because you'll see the lights from the oil room as soon as you finish the forest."

"A thousand thanks, good man," replied the strangers, and, dropping a piece of silver into his hand, they remounted their horses.

They had not been riding more than ten minutes when they came in sight of the old German inn. It was a large, dreary looking stone house, the ruins no doubt of some noted castle which had taken an important part in the German wars.

"An old landmark, I suppose," remarked Waldemar, who seemed to be the leader of the party. As he spoke he knocked vigorously at the door. His summons were answered by a neat, smart looking German girl, who appeared at a window to ask who the strangers might be at such a late hour.

"Wilhelm Rous, Henry Cluber and Waldemar Bleneau," one replied. "We'd like to put up for the night, miss, if you can furnish us only kind of hospitality." Without further questioning Gretien, the innkeeper's daughter, opened the door, gave the visitors seats and told a boy near by to relieve them of their baggage and put the horses under shelter. She then led the newcomers into a small dining room and ordered the cook to prepare supper for them immediately. A meal, no matter how plain, always has a relish after a long, tiresome journey, and so our friends enjoyed a hearty supper, although it was of a very decided character. They then retired to an adjoining apartment, where the guests of the inn were passing away the gloomy evening. It was a large, bare room, containing a number of wooden chairs and a wide, open fireplace, around which were gathered a dozen or more men, some smoking, some dozing, while a few were trying to keep up a conversation which seemed to be languishing.

As the three men entered, one of the group whispered, "Good gracious, here's Waldemar Bleneau, earl of ——, the great favorite of the emperor." Waldemar walked up to the group, and, having returned their greetings, drew forward chairs for his companions, who followed him. The conversation now began to be of a more interesting nature, and for more than an hour the guests discussed the various questions of the day, when suddenly a dreadful storm arose. The wind, which had been howling since dusk, was now accompanied with hail and had become so powerful that the huge trees groaned under it and the old inn shook upon its foundation. The guests were somewhat terrified and betook themselves to telling ghost stories. Gretien, the innkeeper's daughter, being anxious to listen, and having great popularity with the old customers, was invited to join the party. One story after another was related, each one more terrifying than the other, when Waldemar Bleneau, in order to amuse his companions, challenged Gretien to go out in the storm and walk as far as a grave yard near by and bring him a piece of the hedgewood surrounding it. In return for her bravery he promised to grant her any favor she would ask him.

Gretlett Goldstein was a pretty German girl of 18 years. Though she had little education, she was a general favorite, and it was owing to her genial ways that the inn retained half of its old customers. She had light wavy hair, a clear complexion and such bright blue eyes that they had won all the country lads in the vicinity, but she rejected them all, for one—Hans Varole—the sexton's son. Hans was poor, but Gretien thought him the best and truest lad in all Germany, and she was only waiting until he could procure means for a humble home to become his wife. It was not an uncommon thing for the guests to ask the pretty maid, "And how is your Hans?" "As good as ever," she would answer, with a sly laugh. So when the wealthy nobleman, Waldemar Bleneau, offered Gretien whatever she would ask, it was no wonder that her large eyes fairly sparkled. He could do so much for Hans, she thought, perhaps take him to his castle in Berlin and make him chief steward or clerk or maybe start him in some business so that he might some day be a wealthy citizen. And, after all, she was not at all afraid of ghosts, and when she would return she'd just ask Waldemar to help poor Hans along. All these thoughts flashed through her mind in an instant, and without hesitation she accepted the nobleman's challenge, much to the surprise of the guests. Having adjusted her hood and wrapped a large shawl about her, Gretien opened the heavy door of the inn, and after once more exacting the promise from Waldemar closed it after her and went out into the night.

The graveyard was not more than a quarter of a mile from the inn, but it was hidden from its view by a small missionary chapel, which was falling into decay. Gretien walked bravely down the path toward the chapel for some few yards, when the wind began to howl furiously. On she went even faster for several minutes, but in trying to protect her face from the huge hailstones she had taken the path to the graveyard by mistake and had to retrace her steps almost to the inn. This did not discourage her, and, singing an old familiar hymn to keep up her spirits, she skipped along the road. But the howling of the wind deadened her voice, and Gretien's courage began to forsake her. All the ghost stories she had ever heard at the inn's fireside now came up in her mind. The trees seemed like huge giants wreaking vengeance on her boldness and the voice of the wind sounded in her ears like the groaning of unearthly spirits.

At last, unnerved from fright, she halted and was about retracing her steps when the thought of meeting Waldemar and confessing her timidity stung her to the heart. No, she would not return to the inn without the hedgewood, no matter what it cost her. The church was only a few yards from her, and would it not be cowardly to forfeit Waldemar's promise now that she had gone so far? And, then, how grateful dear Hans would be when he heard how much his Gretien had risked for him. And with this last thought to encourage her she hurried toward the old church. Having reached it safely she breathed a prayer of thanks as she stepped into the vestibule, which was roofless, for a moment's rest before fulfilling the rest of her mission. She had hardly done so when she heard the sound of footsteps coming up the path she had just left. Yes, and the voices of several men who were undoubtedly coming toward her. Her heart sank within her, and as the voices became louder and louder she felt her strength gradually leaving her. What should she do? To call for aid would be useless, for she was too far from any assistance, to fly would be ridiculous, as she would soon be overtaken.

In this extremity she concluded to remain where she was, consoling herself with the idea that the men might probably be strangers in the forest who had lost their way in the storm. So she crouched herself up into a corner of the stone wall, pulled her hood over her eyes and waited anxiously. How long she remained there she could not tell. The minutes seemed like hours as she heard the men rapidly approaching her. They came up at last, and all hope left her when she heard them stop in front of the church. "It's all right," said one in a low, hardly audible whisper. "I knew the fiend would keep all clear off to-night." At the same time something like a piece of paper was thrust into Gretien's hand, and another voice, "It went over toward the church door." His companion rushed forward to find it, and after groping around in the dark for some minutes had to give up the search, much to the comfort of poor, trembling Gretien, who expected each moment to be wrested from her hiding place. As he left the church the man who was waiting hailed him with an oath for causing the delay and told him to proceed with his work, unless he was particularly anxious to be handcuffed.

Both men walked a few yards from the church, where they halted, and from the tone of their voices seemed to be engaged in a lively dispute. Gretien, now feeling more secure and being somewhat curious to see what the men were doing, lifted her hood and moved near the entrance of the church. But what a sight met her eyes! The two men who had just been beside her were engaged in stripping the spoils from a human corpse. The dreadful truth then dawned upon her for the first time. These men were murderous robbers, who had waylaid a traveler in the storm—perhaps some one on his way to the inn. But before Gretien could realize her own danger, the men, having divided the booty between them, carried the body into the graveyard, where they buried it. Then muttering a few words they hurriedly walked through the forest. Gretien did not hear what they said, for she had fallen into a swoon.

Twenty minutes later she opened her eyes to see the bright moonlight streaming in on her, for the storm had entirely abated. Rousing herself, she looked around. Could it be that the forest, now so beautiful and still, could have but a few moments before been the scene of murder and plunder. The sights she had witnessed and the dangers she had encountered that night seemed like a frightful dream, and recalling the awful deed she shuddered from head to foot. Drenched from the storm and weak with fatigue, she rose to her feet with difficulty. Then wrapping her wet cloak around her, she looked timidly around and rushed from the church. But in doing so she stumbled, and stooping down found the purse for which the man had made such a diligent search. Picking it up and placing it under her shawl, she once more left the chapel. Then without daring to look beyond it she walked up to the fence of the graveyard, pulled a piece of the hedgewood and pressing it to her bosom ran at full speed up the path to the inn. She reached it in safety and knocked at the door. But in knocking the lid fell from under her arm. In lifting it from the ground she thought she saw something inside which had the appearance of a name, and holding it up in the moonlight looked at it carefully. But suddenly her face became haggard, her lips lost their color, and with a scream of despair Gretien fell against the door of the inn. What a revelation! There in her hand was the cap in which she had lately embroidered the name so dear to her heart—Hans Varoli.

Waldemar Bleneau, having become anxious as Gretien failed to return, hastened to admit her and reached the door as she fell. He assisted her father in carrying her to a chair, but her lips were sealed and her eyes were closed. There, with the cap on her arm and her hand still clinging the hedgewood, Gretien was dead.—Philadelphia Times.

Where Wooden Spoons Are Made.

A curious industry in Russia, and one which, nevertheless, finds employment for thousands of men, is that of making wooden spoons.

In the district of Semenovsk, where they chiefly come from, no fewer than 7,000 men make a living at the trade. The spoons are generally made from birch wood, and a skillful workman can turn out several hundred a day.

No fewer than 12,000,000 spoons are manufactured during the course of the year, which are sold at 6 to 8 rubles (12s. to 16s.) per thousand.

They find a ready market and penetrate as far as Persia, Khiva, Bokhara and Khokand.

FARMING AS A PROFESSION.

Many Things That Can Be Raised For the Stomach and the Head.

Prosperity and pleasure from farm life require that you aim first to raise your own food and sell only to cover the balance. Begin with the idea simply of independence and not of wealth. It is the best attribute. The rich man does not enjoy as much as the independent man. To do this you must raise hams as well as what are called main crops. Fruit constitutes half or more of a good diet. My own children have never eaten a pound of meat. (My horses have not. I add this as an answer to those who think meat an essential to strength, says E. P. Powell in The Independent. Fijians consider eating eyes essential to long eyesight.) We can raise apples, pears, plums, cherries, currants, berries, grapes, and these, with eggs, chickens, beans and milk and vegetables, will cover nearly all a family needs for the table.

Begin in a very small way. It is an age of splurging and plunging. Do not begin that way. Keep accounts and see that one hand washes the other. Every farm should have its study department as well as its dig department. There are geology, botany, entomology, astronomy all at home for you. Why send the boys off to learn something else? You think you cannot teach them; you can learn. Get books like Comstock's "Entomology" and Shaler's "Geology." Study them as a piece of family work, as our fathers studied Scott's "Commentaries." Then divide your farm work so that a part of it shall be experimental. Pick up facts as well as potatoes. Then have a shop and laboratory, where all the finger wisdom in the family can be developed and muscle wit be encouraged. It will pay in cash and pay in independence and pay in pleasure.

What I mean to emphasize is that home should be big enough in spirit to make elbow room and brain room for the boys and girls. There is no reason why they should feel that home is too narrow for them, and they must get away as soon as possible. I wish my home to be so full and roomy that nothing else shall seem larger to my children. While not opposing schools, I hold they should supplement, not supplant home.—Boston Herald.

Born Criminals.

Born criminals no doubt there are in plenty, just as there are born gentlemen—that is to say, men and women whose circumstances and associations from birth have been such as to impel them toward a career of dishonesty, just as other men's opportunities and limitations lead them to a livelihood by a green grocery.

Born criminals again in another sense there are—that is to say, men born with stronger passions or weaker wills than the majority of their fellows—but these again can scarcely be said to constitute a criminal type, for whether their natural characteristics will lead them into crime or not is, after all, if you examine the matter closely, almost entirely a question of circumstance. Placed in certain circumstances, the man whose temper is rather worse than the average, whose fear of the law is rather less, whose instinct for honesty is rather weaker, will fall into crime. In other circumstances, if he is free from the temptations caused by poverty or is restrained by the influence of his friends or his family, he will remain a respectable member of society. In a word, we shall be inclined to believe, till evidence to the contrary is produced, that the difference between those of us who are confined within jail walls and those who retain their freedom takes its origin more often from a difference of circumstances than from any very marked difference of character at the outset.—Contemporary Review.

Envelopes.

An English paper journal says that the invention of envelopes is within the memory of middle aged persons, and was the result of a Brighton, England, stationer's endeavor to make his store look attractive. He took a fancy for ornamenting his store windows with high piles of paper, graduated from the largest to the smallest size in use. To bring his pyramid to a point he cut cardboard into very minute squares. Ladies took these cards to do small sized note paper, and voted it "perfectly lovely." So great was the demand that the stationer found it desirable to cut paper the size so much admired. But there was one difficulty—the little notes were so small that when folded there was no space for address; so after some thought the idea of an envelope pierced the stationer's brain. He had them cut by a metal plate, and soon, so great was the demand, he commissioned a dozen houses to manufacture them for him. From such small beginnings came this important branch of industry.

Lord Russell's Wit.

In his early days, Lord Russell of Killowen, chief justice of England, had a good deal to put up with from coarse men and judges who thought to prance down his exuberance. One day, Sir Digby Seymour, Q. C., kept up a flow of small talk when Russell was speaking.

"I wish you would be quiet, Seymour," said Russell, with his Irish accent.

"My name is Seymour, if you please," replied the learned gentleman, with mock dignity.

"Then I wish you would sit here and say less," was the rejoinder.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Dentists' Folding Chairs.

There are folding chairs for dentists' use which can be taken down and packed in a box made for the purpose. When set up, they are of the same general proportions as the regular chair, capable of adjustment and comfortable. Such chairs are made for the use of dentists who divide their time among different points, more especially in regions where the transportation facilities are limited, as in parts of South America, and for more convenient handling in shipment to points difficult of access.—New York Sun.

Four Aces Beat Five Kings.

The joke about four aces beating five kings has been often sprung, but there are a few people who know that Bill Lange of the Chicago team was the hero of that famous incident. It was years ago in San Francisco, when Lange was a budding boy and King Kalakaua was a social star during his trip to this country. Lange, although a young, was even then a hot sport, and, so it chanced, happened one night to find himself in a hot poker game with King Kalakaua opposite. Bill had three aces—history deposes not as to how many he had held out—and Kalakaua three kings. Everybody dropped out except the king and the boy. Kalakaua caught another king in the draw, and Lange received the final ace. There was considerable betting, a coast millionaire backing Lange heavily, and a goodly sum was in sight when the call came. The hands were shown, and thus it happened that Bill Lange, with four aces, defeated five kings—Kalakaua and the four lesser monarchs of the deck.—Chicago News.

The Game of Draughts.

Draughts in some shape or form is doubtless a very ancient pastime. Indeed, the safest thing to say about it is that its origin is lost in the mists of antiquity. Representations of persons playing at a game resembling draughts are frequently found on ancient Egyptian monuments at least 3,000 years old. The Greeks had a similar game, from whom possibly it passed to the Romans. At least the old Roman game of latrunculi seems to have been a kind of draughts, though it is doubtful if the game as now played is very ancient. The game was popular and well known in France and Spain in the seventeenth century and was probably played there and in England centuries before that. That it was from France the game came into many of the other countries is evident from the fact that the French name—jeu de dames—passed with it.

Dam or damme was once the regular English name for one of the pieces. In Germany the game is still called damespiel, in Holland the board is dambord, and in Scotland (as will be remembered by readers of Dean Ramsay's anecdotes) dambrod still survives. In the United States the less usual name of chequers, spelled checkers, is employed. Polish, Spanish, Italian and Turkish draughts are varieties of the same game. The Polish game, which has several peculiarities, was introduced to Paris in 1723 and was at first played on a board of 100 squares with 40 men.—Chambers' Journal.

William Thomson—Lord Kelvin.

William Thomson's father undertook complete charge of his education till he was 10 years old, quickening his latent genius into activity and training him with such skill that the boy, directed along the best methods of work, which had been made exquisitely clear to him, advanced by leaps and bounds into the very arcana of the exactest of all the sciences. His classical and general education was likewise carefully attended to by his father. He was matriculated as a student in Glasgow at the early age of 10 years—little more than out of his childhood.

He was a mere youth when he went to St. Peter's college, Cambridge, and at the age of 21 he passed as second wrangler and was first Smith's prizeman. But ere he had won these honors he was already famous for his contributions at 18 years of age to the Cambridge and Dublin Mathematical Journal had attracted the attention and excited the wonder of the scientific world in France as well as in England by their boldness, originality and accuracy. He was shortly afterward made editor of that famous journal and gathered round him a brilliant staff of writers. Yet it was his own papers which chiefly aroused the attention of scientists. When 22 years of age, he was appointed to the chair of natural philosophy in Glasgow, which he has now occupied for 50 years and which will forever be associated with his name.—Good Words.

Napoleon After the Battle of Dresden.

Professor Sloane's "Life of Napoleon," in The Century, takes up the "Collapse of the Western Empire." In describing the end of the grand army after the battle of Dresden, Professor Sloane says: The night of the 7th was spent in indecision as to any one or all of these ideas, but in active preparation for the retreat. Any contingency might be met or a resolve taken when the necessity arose. During that night the emperor took two warm baths. The habit of drinking strong coffee to prevent drowsiness had induced attacks of nervousness, and these were not diminished by his load of care. To allay these and other ailments he had had recourse for some time to frequent tepid baths. Much has been written about a mysterious malady which had been steadily increasing, but the burden of testimony from the emperor's closest associates at this time indicates that in the main he had enjoyed excellent health throughout the second Saxon campaign. There were certainly intervals of self indulgence and of lassitude, of excessive emotion and depressing self examination, which seemed to require the offset of a physical stimulus; but, on the whole, natural causes, complex, but not inexplicable, sufficiently account for the subsequent disasters.

Alexandrite.

A popular but rare stone of recent discovery is the alexandrite, which owes its name to quite a peculiar series of coincidences. On the day of the coming of age of the Emperor Alexander of Russia the discovery of a new variety of mineral was made in the emerald mines of the Catherine mountains. This stone varied in color from emerald to the darkest green, having often a reddish tint. Its especial peculiarity is that, when exposed to artificial light, its color changes entirely to a beautiful red. As green and red are the national colors of Russia, and in commemorative honor of the day on which the stone was discovered, the name alexandrite was given the mineral and the custom inaugurated of submitting all the finer specimens to the emperor for his selection before dealers are allowed to purchase.—New York Dispatch.

Then She Took It Out.

She was a new nurse at the hospital, and she had been told to use the water at 105 degrees.

The doctor, watching, say the patient wince. "That water is too hot," he said, testing it. "I said 105 degrees, not 115 degrees."

The nurse turned with dignified protest: "I tested the water two minutes ago," she said. "I put the thermometer in and left it until it touched 105 degrees."—New York Times.

Native Indian Soldiers.

India pays for her army, but she does not pay for our fleet, and it is our fleet and not her army which saves her from the invasions which if we lost command of the sea would in three years destroy at once her commercial prosperity and her immunity from internal disorder. She ought not to pay extra money for a project which is ours, but it is perfectly fair that she should pay the wages and expenses which she would pay if the troops were at home. Her garrison is not the feebler, but the stronger, for a spell of foreign work, which reveals and cures defects of equipment, which binds officers and men together as nothing else does, and which, above all, gives the fighting races—Sikhs, Pathans and Mahrattas—an outlet for their inborn military spirit. There is no education for soldiers like a well managed expedition, more especially if they are men who enjoy it and if they belong to races which tend to despondency and fat if they never have anything to do. We think it quite fine if Canadian or Australian regiments volunteer to help us and not to mention that every native soldier is a volunteer who enlists uncompelled even by "the stern conscription of hunger," among the Sikhs and Pathans, at all events, a call for volunteers would be answered by entire regiments stepping to the front. They love the excitement of campaigning, which to them seems life. It is nonsense to talk of "mercenaries" in an empire 100 years old. It is as much their interest while the empire lasts that it should succeed in war as it is ours, and, provided there is no conscription, we see no more moral objection to calling on her majesty's Indian than on her majesty's British or Irish subjects to fight on her behalf.—London Spectator.
